This fan-fiction article, School of the Leptocyon (Chinvat), was written by Adalwulf of Aedirn and Witcher190. Please do not edit this fiction without the writers' permission.

The School of the Leptocyon was a school of elven-based witchers headquartered in the world of Chinvat. It was founded following the exodus of the elves into Chinvat by elven witchers from the School of the Fox. Dedicated to defending the elven settlements in that vast world and finding a cure for The Plague.

While Cervin, commanded by the High Council of Elves (according to the legends that came to the Continent) was sent to look for Marbas in his tower, in search of answers, or at least, a possibility of a cure, other than what was trying to be developed by these witchers. It is for this reason that in many stories, he is mentioned as a witcher of this school. More likely, however, it would simply have been an honorary title.

They are mentioned, in The Lost Art of Witchery, and even though there were false things in the document and treaty, they are one of the few things that are true, in their own way.

Origins

Along with Cervin, many surviving witchers took advantage of the possibility of the connection between spheres to leave the world. Some for not adapting to the changes, others simply because they considered that they were redundant, etc... There were many reasons, but the most likely was that if the elves left, they did not want to suffer excessive discrimination due to the lack of elves. Apart from, in more "honorable" terms, the need to protect them from unknown threats.

It is unknown how many left, or how many perished in the Second Conjunction, but it is known, according to the folklore of various areas, like Vicovaro and Ebbing, at least four, left with them, in the various elven waves of migration that took place.

History

Restoring of a Keep (1)

The adaptation to Chinvat was somewhat complicated. Due not only to the different terrain, since it was a world, molded by the ether, in such a way that it became a ring world, but because of its size ( since, was about one million miles wide and approximately the diameter of The World's orbit ) and the post-apocalyptic situation of the world in which they found themselves. This forced them to change some of their plans. They settled in one of the keeps they found in better condition. Cleaning it from the results of The Plague, with some effort. Taking a few months, to rebuild it in conditions.

Contact with the elven settlements ( 1 ) 🔒

Originally, they tried to contact again, with the members of the School of the Fox in the World. But this failed. Perhaps, due to the effects of the Second Conjunction or the magic in this world. It is not known. In return, they managed to adapt their medallions in a failure, to the magic of their new sphere. For, since they had arrived, they had not stopped vibrating.

So after that, they decided to contact the nearest scattered elven settlements. Finding, many, destroyed by The Plague, which gave them purpose. With the exception (to the best of their knowledge) of the mixed settlements composed of Aen Seidhe and Aen Woedde. There they found Cervin, whom they offered to join, after adapting his medallion to the magic of this world, thanks to the help of some mages, who would later join them due to the near-extinction situation they were facing.

After that, the attacks by creatures of The Plague returned, which gave rise to the High Council of Elves, to deal with the situation. And after an intense debate, and the verification of the healers, that Cervin, who had been bitten by one of the monstrosities that caused the collapse of that world, did not suffer the infection, and the initial investigation of the elves of the School of the Fox, of the history of that world. Revealing the history of Azgaryk, Marbas and Berith to their people. It was decided to finance the school project they had, making them protectors and researchers. Mainly, of The Plague and occasionally, of Berith, fearing their return. As a result, Cervin was sent on a long and dangerous journey in search of the Tower of Marbas, to see if he could find a way to put an end to the threat and the remaining witchers gave way to the birth of the School of the Leptocyon. After that, because of his unquestioning acceptance of his mission, and because of the courage Cervin showed. He was awarded an honorary title as a member of the school.

Characteristics

The characteristics of the Witchers of the School of the Leptocyon are similar to the School of the Fox but with more elvish leanings. It is said that, with the passage of time, they were among the few, which maintained a level of technology, similar to the one they brought with them. and did not suffer an excessive setback, due to the harshness of this world.

Financial Situation

Because of their disconnection from The World. These witchers, were funded in more prosperous times by various elven settlements. When this was not the case, teams of scavengers were sent to recover materials from the various ruins around Chinvat.

Potions

With the seeds of plants from the World and the new flora from Chinvat new potions were developed for the School of the Leptocyon.

Unique Mutations

The witchers who migrated from the School of the Fox were allowed to take the base mutagen but not the newly developed one and modified it, thus new Witchers of the School of the Leptocyon did not develop unique abilities like their parent school's graduates but enjoyed the benefits of evened out mood and emotions. Also with the elven races having a natural longevity it would seem that the newly modified mutagen used by the School of the Leptocyon would turn their long life into functionally true immortality at least where it comes to aging, allowing a elven born witcher from the School of the Leptocyon to stay youthful and vigorous up until their death usually against a monster.
